One day we went for a ride.
We took along some sandwiches.

I made believe I was a lion.
"How can Daddy drive properly with all that noise?" Mommy said.

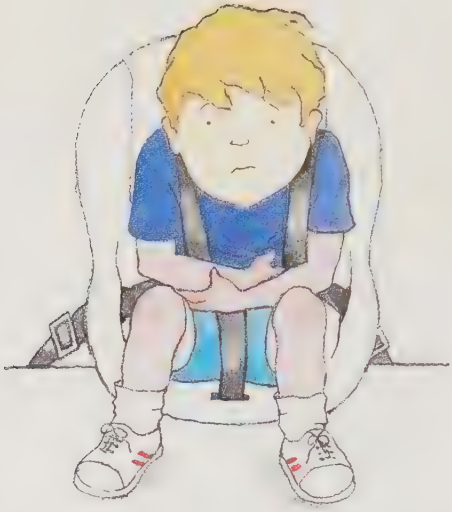
I went with Daddy to pay for the gas.
"Can I please have some candy?" I said.

At lunchtime we went to a cafeteria.
I only wanted ice cream.

"Take a nap now," Mommy said.
"We won't be home till late."
"I have to go to the bathroom," I said.



"I think it's going to rain,"
Mommy said.
"I feel sick," I said.
"Quick! Stop!" Mommy shouted.

We cleaned up the car.
Then it wouldn't start again.
Daddy tried and tried,
but nothing happened.
"Call a garage for help!" he said.

A truck towed us home.
I got to sit next to the driver.
"Today was the best car trip ever!"
I told my friends.

OUT-AND-ABOUT BOOKS

OUT-AND-ABOUT BOOKS are perfect for children at that very special age—when the outside world has just become a place to wonder about and explore. Here are delightful glimpses of boys and girls meeting new people, venturing to new places, and experiencing new things, all depicted with the humor and accuracy of detail that have become Helen Oxenbury's trademarks.
